

Extension Task: Getting Started

The goal of the extension task is to “extend” the ideas of the unit and apply them to our lives. We have been discussing the interplay between individuals and their communities/society. Think of the various texts we’ve read and the ways authors have depicted this theme.

1. Think of possible topics. Brainstorm potential areas of research that will allow you to examine the interplay between society and self. Draft potential research questions that are of interest to you. Generate topics/questions that are substantial enough for researching and accomplishing the goals of the extension task.

2. Then, select one of your research topics/questions and find two scholarly (reliable, valid) sources related to your topic. One source must come from the databases (tntel.info). Skim/read the sources and note key ideas and pertinent information as well as the web address or MLA citation for each source.
